Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Sunday 23 May 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Persistent rain clearing all but northern Scotland. Showers elsewhere.

This Evening and Tonight:
Band of heavy rain and locally very strong winds moving north and east, clearing England and Wales but becoming persistent over northern Scotland. Clearer spells with showers over Northern Ireland then spreading into west England and Wales overnight.

Monday:
Persistent rain for northern Scotland and feeling cold here. Heavy and perhaps thundery showers for Wales and England. A little warmer for Northern Ireland and southern Scotland where mostly dry.

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Further showers or longer spells of rain in the east. Mostly dry in the west with sunny spells, these conditions becoming more widespread on Thursday and turning a little warmer.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.